

Marta Patallo

Marta has dedicated her professional journey to understand social complexity and diversity and creating strategies that promote equality and inclusion for individuals and communities.

With a strong commitment to the defense of human rights, in addition to acting as an advisor in several civil society organizations, Marta has been a consultant for regional and international Human Rights organizations, such as the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, the Institute of Human Rights Public Policies on Human Rights of MERCOSUR and the International Organization for Migration, where she has been in charge of coordinating and monitoring projects and public policies and training dozens of officials and human rights defenders.

Her career as an academic, with a Master's and PhD in Anthropology, has led her to research and teach at various academic centers in the Global South, including the Fluminense Federal University in Brazil, the University of Buenos Aires and the National University of Rosario in Argentina and the African Leadership University in Mauritius.

As a result of her research, she has published numerous articles in academic journals and books addressing issues such as institutional violence, justice in crimes against humanity, migration and refugee policies, and qualitative methodologies.

So far, Marta has called 7 countries across 5 continents as home, and she loves meeting new people, as she loves meeting new people and exploring new contexts.
